

Spain

A wealth of reasons to visit

See over for Majorca

Football is Spain's national pastime and hockey a very well developed sport at all levels. Although rugby is still a minority sport, it is developing well and there is a very good youth policy and structure.

Spain offers a wealth of reasons to visit on a sporting and cultural tour. It is famous for its beaches, sunshine, sangria, sherry, pelota, paella, and Real Madrid.

Our first suggested itinerary takes you to Barcelona, a beautiful and vibrant city set between the mountains and Mediterranean Sea. With an array of modern structures and unique architecture, such as the famous 'Sagrada Familia' created by the renowned modernist architect Antoni Gaudi, Barcelona is a fascinating city to visit.

Majorca is the destination for our other suggested itinerary and alternative touring destinations include Spain's capital Madrid and Desert Springs in Almanzora, a golf and tennis resort.

MAJORCA

One of the most surprising things about Majorca is the amount of sport on offer and the quality of the facilities which are regularly used by international teams for training camps. Rugby, football, hockey, swimming, golf, basketball and tennis are incredibly popular. For something different this is definitely a little sporting gem.

Majorca is the largest of the Balearic islands lying in the Mediterranean Sea off the south east coast of mainland Spain. The coastal landscape is graced with coves, beaches and cliffs.

Besides its famous seaside resorts, the charming capital Palma is worth a visit. Despite having become a modern, vibrant city, Palma has managed to retain its old town and its ancient culture and charm.
